

ABSTRACT

A device is disclosed that allows a puncture needle to be inserted into a catheter. Once the puncture needle has performed its function, it can shoot back into the device such that there is a reduce likelihood of needlestick injury. Vacuum is used to assist in the shoot back function.